1. Increasing services for people with physical and intellectual disabilities. Set up housing for semi-capable people to live in with a caretaker to help manage the household (chore rotation, taking everyone to activities or the grocery store, etc). Here's an example in Chicago:

2. dont know
3. doing a good job with limited resources
4. Better access to therapies needed, both mental and physical! Do better by our Veterans and elders.
5. Programs to teach diversity in schools and public. Parks & events for every Disability.
6. More affordable housing.
7. Stop pandering to special interest groups
8. There is nowhere for adults with mental/autism problems to go. They are invisible. Councilors won't see them, the hospital won't listen to them, they just get put out on the street over and over. My disabled grandson is treated well. I think the difference is no one will test and label my son so he gets no help. My grandson was worked with since birth.
9. The school needs a wheelchair ramp. There's a parent who is disabled who cannot drop their child off at school at the front. This creates seclusion and a feeling of being left out. This is not acceptable and the city needs to fix this!
10. We're pretty inclusive.
